Galt Little Theatre wraps-up a successful 2012-13 season with the comedy, The Kitchen Witches, by Caroline Smith. Directed by Denise Gismondi, The Kitchen Witches is an amusing story about two women, Isabelle and Dolly, played by Tracy Biggar and Kristine Fortner, the co-stars of a cable TV cooking show and their love/hate relationship both on and off the stage.

Gismondi describes their rivalry as a battle between the two characters that transforms the cooking show into a war zone.

Caught in the middle is Dolly's son Stephen, played by GLT newcomer Jules Topalian. Stephen struggles to keep the peace between the two women while trying to maintain the cooking shows' success.

Annie Titizian as Bobbie rounds out the four person cast: The cast that Gismondi describes as "Absolutely marvellous"

The Kitchen Witches is Denise Gismondi's directing debut with GLT. She has been on stage at our theatre in such shows as "Rumours" and "Everything I Know I Learned in Kindergarten". Denise has experience directing at other venues including Elora Community Theatre. --- Contributed by Jake Robinson

The cast and crew of "The Kitchen Witches" are well into rehearsal and looking forward to a terrific show.
